Sharp Debate Over Football Changes

Only Three Negative Votes On Proposition to Make Changes—Larger Colleges Favor Present Rules with Some Changes—More New London to Norwich Running Talk.

New York, Dec. 28.—The Intercollegiate Athletic association adopted and submitted to its rules committee tonight a resolution calling for a modification of the football playing rules whereby the injury to contestants may be confined to a minimum.

This is the resolution as introduced by Prof. E. K. Hall of Dartmouth and adopted after three hours of acrimonious discussion:

"That the football rules committee of this association be instructed to use every possible endeavor to bring about such a modification of the rules as in their judgment shall tend to reduce to a minimum the danger of physical injury to the players and at the same time retain as far as may be possible the most desirable and wholesome features of the game."

Only three negative votes were registered against the resolution, but nearly every college in the west had something to say concerning it.

Stagg Wanted a Gag Law.
Prof. A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago made a motion which would prohibit all officials of a football game, including umpires, referees and all other participants, from talking to newspaper men after the game. Stagg made a strong appeal for this gag law, saying he had been grossly misquoted at times; but the convention defeated the motion by an overwhelming vote.

The revised rule was ordered, it is understood, with due consideration of the associations of Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Cornell and a few other institutions which are not members of the intercollegiate association. Harvard has joined the association, but its representative has been known that his institution would not be bound by the new football rules of the association, though it would recognize its regulation of other minor sports.

Have Substituted English Rugby Game.
A letter was read from David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford Junior university, stating that the American game had been abandoned there and that the English Rugby game had been found satisfactory, not only to the students, but to the spectators.

In the discussions tonight it became apparent that the larger colleges were in favor of the present playing rules, perhaps in a modified form, and that the smaller institutions were violently opposed to them.

The representative of nearly every institution of high learning between New York and San Francisco made an address and many offered motions designed to limit the present dangers of football. These offerings became so confused that Hall's resolution was adopted as a compromise.

Representatives from Cornell and other institutions not directly represented in the association suggested that rules minimizing the danger of the sport would be acceptable. It was the consensus of opinion that the rules regulating mass play and the running tackle, otherwise known as the tying up and playing through the line would have to be done away with. The representatives of a number of large colleges expressed themselves not only in favor of this, but conveyed the threat that they would either adopt a modified form of football or would withdraw from the association.

PHIL KING'S SUGGESTIONS.
Famous Princeton Quarter Tells How to Modify Football.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Phil King, three times quarterback on the All-American football team, and now an official at Princeton, tonight forwarded his suggestions for changing the rules of football to the Intercollegiate Athletic association, which will meet in New York tomorrow.

These are the suggestions: Ideas for a betterment of the game have been sought and he has given them after some study.

Play the backs five yards back of the line of scrimmage.

Play seven men on the line of defense at all times. In order to set the line of defense spreading against that formation, allow the quarter to run anywhere within the ball. In the event of a forward pass, a retained, remove all restrictions, allowing passes over the line and allowing any player to recover the ball, after it has been touched and fumbled.

SMALL HARM DONE
BY THE ROCK ISLAND FLURRY

Some Individual Stocks Advanced Briskly Yet Operations Were Under Restraint.

New York, Dec. 28.—In the stock market proper, the Rock Island fell into the background today, after its highly sensational performance of yesterday.

These performances left an impression on the minds of traders, and a security capable of such eccentric and inexplicable action might carry with it a certain amount of suspicion, which discouraged attempts to experiment with it.

As for the episode itself, not much fear was felt of direct consequences for harm from it, since it was so soon over and so had prevented time for the operation of harmful influences. The supposition continued to gain force that reckless and blundering manipulation of manipulative methods were at the bottom of the incident. On this supposition it would follow that the buying of the stock to 81 cent, not from frightened shorts, but from the speculative party which had managed the advance. An operator short of the stock, unless he had been on the floor of the stock exchange would not have had time to execute a buying order on the advance, so quickly was it followed by the collapse. For these reasons there was not the fear of losses and danger of failures likely to be caused by the operation of an ordinary day's trading.

For the wider and indirect consequences likely to result from the episode, there was a feeling of anxiety. The matter having taken on the proportions of a scandal and the stock exchange committee appointed to investigate it being engaged in the day in the work, the subject was kept in a conspicuous place in the day's events. It was remarked that the Hughes commission into its investigation of exchanges and the stock exchange committee appointed to investigate it being engaged in the day in the work, the subject was kept in a conspicuous place in the day's events. It was remarked that the Hughes commission into its investigation of exchanges and the stock exchange committee appointed to investigate it being engaged in the day in the work, the subject was kept in a conspicuous place in the day's events.

From Washington also came a report that the federal authorities were showing renewed interest in the question of possible regulation of speculative dealings in futures. These considerations and the continued preparations for the annual money settlements kept the stock market operations under restraint, but did not depress prices. The small harm done by the Rock Island flurry was more than made a negative, favorable influence as demonstrating the strength of the speculative position. Expectation of a relaxation in money markets after the turn of the year persists.

Individual stocks advanced briskly from particular causes, not always shared. The coppers were strong and were influenced by a rise in the London price of the metal.

The quick action of the Delaware and Hudson refunding bonds by the bankers who took them from the company made a good impression on the investment situation, although the general bond market continued dull and unresponsive.
